

Noora Hannula vs. Soma The Augmented-Reality Girl – THE ULTIMATE BATTLE

During a 45-minute showdown choreographer and dancer Noora Hannula tests her physical limits against a 3D animated virtual girlfriend Soma. Inspired by the most popular game heroines, this dead-hardcore, dead-funny physical dance performance showcases the gravity of the reality in an art of the impossible, as the human character; Noora mimics flight sequences, extreme martial arts and erotic clichés in this grotesquely embodied attempt to beat staged 3D reality.

The piece is co-produced by Kulturværftet and Bora Bora and supported by Danish Arts Council, Nordic Culture Fund, Koneensätiö (FI), Dansk Komponist Forening and Knud Højgaards Fond.

REVIEWS

"The performance was technically marvelous and it began a reflection on how we relate to the near future where virtual reality melts more and more with our own." ISCENE

"I can safely say I've never seen anything like it. There is a wild clash between human physical endurance and Soma's inhumane effortlessness. It's completely wild to look at! It is performances like this that help push the limits of what we think the theater can." DEN4VAEG
